REFERRING to the Hon. T. C. HAYLLAR'S

statement at the last Council meeting as to what becomes of the men deported, we think it necessary to removes false impression which the hon, gontleman's remarks may have Speaking of the criminals deported or released from gaol on conditional-pardon, he says :-- "There seems to be an impression] that they go away. When there is a system of emigration going on, as there was a short time ago to Cooktown, a good many of them; a.m. and passed Cape St. James at four c'clock do go away.". The inference to be drawn from these words is, we are sure, quite inconsistent with the actual facts. That now and then a man released from gaol may, after he has obtained some money, have found his way down to the Colonies is quite possible, but the idea that ex-convicts formed any appreciable part of the stream of emigration which a short time back flowed to Cooktown. is almost too ridiculous to be seriously considered. Large as we consider our criminal population, the proportion released and deported is trivial indeed when taken in comparison with the thousands who left here at that time for Queensland. But that they could not have gone will be obvious for the following reasons. Each emigrant passes the Harbour Master's and doctor's examination, and a branded man would be detected at once and refused his passage. Any one who has noticed the emigrants with their kits for the passage must have seen, that they were respectable villagers. The movements of these emigrants immediately proceding the steamer's departure are perfectly well known, and, as a matter of fact, they are respectable villagers who have arrived, chiefly from the northern part of Kwangtong, a day or two before the steamer leaves. Sometimes, indeed, a whole clan, consisting of several scores of persons, emigrate in a body-The majority of the emigrants possess some means and give evidence of respectability. Is it likely the class that Mr. HAYLLAR mentions would be provided with kits or be able to find their passage money or obtain credit for it? The other passengers also would strongly object to their presence, as the former | broke the camel's back it is true, but publick would be the victims of the thieving proclivities of the latter on the voyage. The present Gavernor of Queensland would not time before. I have yet to learn that any have been at strong a supporter of emigration to the Colony in which be takes so great of that colony might be of opinion that the Goan interest had he not been fully aware of vernor was pursuing a common sense course of the general excellent character of the emi-Australian Mail Company, whose steamers have carried most of the emigrants to Cooktown, and who have naturally been that action. The opinion of the public here, as most anxious that the emigration should soon as the Governor gave indications of the be continued, would, we are convinced, not have made the strenuous efforts they was predicted and the prediction was fulfilled. to this and, had they not known that the emigrants belonged to an altogether different class from that referred to by most important and salutary effect already. Has Mr. HAYLLAR. The opinion is, moreover, gradually gaining ground in Queensland that the poll-tax of £10 which has for some time excluded Chinese from that part of Australia should be repealed. The Queenslanders bave had experience of the Chinese, and in many parts are now sadly missing them. The agitation against them was got up The public meeting was a note of warning which ns a party cry, professedly in the interests of European labour; it has never seriously been made a ground of objection against them that they were not, as a body, well-conducted and law-abiding. But, if Mr. HATLLAR's groundless accusation be allowed to go to the public of Queensland unrefuted, both the party which believes the Chinese are almost a necessity for developing the northern part of Queensland, and that which, for its own ends, has kept them out, will feel that they cannot be right in receiving as colonists the seam and offscouring of the population of the South of China. Mr. HAYLLAR, in making use of the words he did, could not, we think, have clearly approhended their full import. He will have the opportunity of explaining himself at the next meeting of whatever since the breaking out of the familie. the Council, and it is to be hoped, in the Again, I would remark and when I say that my exinterests of fair-play, he will avail himself

The first great difficulty facing insurgents is generally a want of arms, and there is every reason to believe By Appointment to His Excellency the Go. that the mass of Li Yung Chor's followers are miserably armed and equipped. He could not obtain a proper supply in Kwangsi, but he might possibly get them smuggled across the border from Tonquin. His Chinese memorial. Here we have a Brigadier-General at the head of a large army avowedly bent upon the subjugation of Annam, but after lingering on the borders of Tonquin for two or three did not hold the meeting as contemplated. [17] weeks, without apparently attempting to strike a single blow, he withdraws for fear of embarrassing himself with the French. It is incredible that he should have taken so long to discover this danger, and the readiest solution of the mystery that has attended his movements is that his march towards Tonquin was a clever pretence. The Canton Authorities have been keenly watching Li's movements, we hear. apparently without arriving at any very de- Government, as they were equally concerned in finite determination respecting them. The French mail steamer Anadyr had not anxiety is felt as it is feared she may have broken down. She left Saigon on Saturday last at 11 the same day, consequently she has been out from Saigon five and a half dayout the time of writing. The steamship Killarney, Captain O'Noill, from Hangkok, reports having oncountered strong gales and heavy sea, and it is probably had weather which is keeping the Anadyr back.

The Indian Tea Gazette has the following With reference to the China survey which now likely to take place, we think the object should be to find the shortest and best route lying between the Brahmapootra and the Yangtare Kiang, so as to place the two rivers in trade communication. As little cart road, and as much water route as possible, is what should be aimed at. Hence, Batang, by a route East of Cooper's, should be reached, being the nearest town to the Yangtsze, or else Yoong Ning, further south, should be tried for. Santa Foo, which some are advocating, is, it seems to us, the wrong direction, as leading towards the Moikong instead of the Yangteze. The Santa Foo route, according to Baber's account, is a most unhealthy one, and lies nowhere near the Yangtsze."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." SIR —Statistics and various other returns have from time to time appeared in your paper issued by or from the Government Departments and other sources in your colony and the apparent increase of crime is attributed and reported on by the no doubt, grateful recipients of your bubernatorial favours, to the flocking of original rom this port and the late scarcity of rice at the North. It was entirely out of deference to His Excellency, who, not wishing to encourage anything having the least appear ance of agitation, doubted whether public meetings are the most prudent and efficient means by which the wishes of the inhabitants of a colony like this should be expressed that they had how drawn up a Chinese momerial embodying their views and opinions regarding the present unsatisfactory state of things in the colony The memorial was signed by almost all the lead ing Chinese of the colony, and being written in Chinese was carefully considered before it was signed by the memorialists. The speaker concluded by requesting His Excellency to forward the memorial to the Right Hon, the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies. His Excel lency then said that be was very glad to see them and he would not fall to forward the memorial to the Secretary of State. The Chinese were just tified in bringing their views to the notice of the the interests of the colony. They were quite right in saving in their memorial that they pay a larger shere of the taxation and own more land than the residents of any other nationality. their memorial it was stated that the memorialists hoped that the Chinese and Europeans might live harmoniously. His Excellency hoped so too. and had no doubt they would. The memorialists then shook hands with the Governor and with drew. MEHEMET ALIS OPINIONS.

An intimate acquaintance of the late Mehem All Pashs has contributed to a Berlin journa number of characteristic anecdotes of the brave and gunial soldier. He told his friends that he had three reasons for pressing so eagerly to be accredited as a plenipotentiary to the Berlin Congress -ist, ambition to take an eminen part in the province of politics as well as in strategy, and thus commend himself to his lovernment; 2nd, a passionate longing to be again m his native land, which he always called h home," and for which he said he had "the of a child," and 3rd, admiration for the person of Prince Bismorck, whom he eagerly desired to knew personally. Perhaps the best anecdote is one which dates from the time just after the peace of San Stefano. The Grand Duke Nicholas observed with very discontented eyes the Turkish intronosments, which rose up in wor-increasing dimonsions before the Russian front. One day he appeared within the Turkish rayon, surrounded by his suite, and prohibited. Mehemet Ali from all further work. "Immediately," said he, "I gave the alarm, and vigorously stopped the men from working on the fortifications. Naturally, however, during the night we worked so much the harder. UNKNOWN AFRICA

emains to be done before our knowledge of Africa

is anything like complete. He shows that carcely a century ago the map of Africa was illed with the most fantastic errors. The Nile ssued from the mountains of the Moon, the shara was only a sea of sand; and the Mirer and Senegal formed a single river. The second salf of the 19th century marks a new era in geography, and most particularly in the geography of Africa, in which there now remain only seven regions, vast, it is true, on which the gions are, in the north; the Sahore and the Liyan Desert; in the west, the country between the Jeliba and the coast of Guines: in the centre the upper course and the sources of the Binus and the Shari; in the east the interior of the Cape Guardaful and the chain of lofty mountains in the Equatorial zone; at the centre the completion of the basins of the Nile, the Congo, and the Ogove; and, finally, la the south the basin of the Cunene. The Sahara, with the Labyan Desert, forms altogether a great natural region traced on our mans rather after the information of the natives than according to the discoveries Enropean voyagers. This region is not only nearest to us, but it is also match the most extensive, measuring 5,750,000 square kilometress a superficies equal to all Europe, except the half of Russia. The Sahara, in upite of its desolated aspect, is far from deserving our dischin; its populations have a history as old as that of Egypt; and its cases are jewels which do the greatest honour to their creators and maintainers. Quitting the Desert and penetrating the basin of the Jolian; we find a surface of 1,200,000 square kilomètres of unknown country separating the Joliha from the coast of Guinea. The exploration of this region would bring us very desirable information on the upper course of the Volta and the affinents of the Joliba, which are all unknown. - France has many advantageous points on the coast here frem which exploring parties might be sent out, and she therefore ought to set herself to fill up the lacuns. In the Equatorial zone some of the greatest problems of African geography remain o be decided. First, we find an unknown area. of 800,000 square kilometres in which to seek the completion of our knowledge of the basins of the Niger and the Shari, and for this it would be necessary to discover the sources of the Binue; aituated about 3 deg. or 4 deg. N. lat., and 15 deg. or 16 deg. E. long. The question of the Shari, which feeds lake Chad, is equally important. Possibly the Melle of Sohweinfurth may boits upper course, though Stanley's recent discoveries throw some doubt on this theory. It seems matter for surprise that we still remain so ignerant of the most eastern part of Africa, the region which forms a triangle culminating in Cape Guardafui and whose interior is totally unexplored at though two of its sides are bathed by the waters of the ocean. Unfortunately, its exploration presents great difficulties; the fanatio and superstitious Somalis have hitherto opposed all European inrusion. This circumstance is all the more unfortunate that that country presents subjects of investigation, no only geographical, but also historical of the highest interest. The Somali, in fact, have had a history, and possess monuments which point to a very ancient cirilization. Returning towards the Equator along the course of the Juba and the Osi, we might examine the supposed existence of a chain of high monutains lying in the direction of the meridians then the bounce of our knowledge of the basins of the Nile and the Congo, and, finally, the question of the sources of the Ogove, lacune which, when combined, make area of nearly 2,000,000 square kilometres. The desiderata of the map of the Nile basin in the equatorial zone are mainly two-the course of the affluents east of the Nile and of their tributaries, and a complete
